THE GAZETTE. WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 15, 1861.

A Sea Fight.

DESCRIBED BY A SAILOR ENGAGED IN IT. The firing, says Leech, commenced. The roaring of cannon could now be heard from all parts of our trembling ship, and, mingling with that of our foes, it made a most hideous noise. By and by I heard the shot strike the side of our ship; the whole scene grew indescribably confused and horrible; it was like some awfully-tremendous thunder-storm, carrying death in every flash, and strewing the ground with its victims; only in our case the scene was rendered more horrible by the torrents of blood on our deck.

The cries of the wounded now rang through all parts of the ship. These were carried to the cock-pit as fast as they fell, while those more fortunate men who were killed outright, were immediately thrown overboard. A man had one of his hands cut of by a shot, and almost at the same moment he received another shot, which tore open his bowels in a terrible manner. As he fell, two or three men took him, and as he could not live, threw him overboard. The battle went on. Our men kept cheering with all their might. I cheered with them, though I confess I scarcely know for what. So terrible had been the work of destruction round us, it was termed the slaughter house. We had several boys and men killed and wounded near us. The schoolmaster received a deathwound. The brave boatswain, who came from the sick-bed to the din of battle, was fastening a stopper on a back-stay which had been shot away, when his head was smashed to pieces by a cannon-ball; another man, going to complete the unfinished task, was also struck down. A fellow, named John, was carried past me, wounded; and I distinctly heard the large blood-drops fall pat, pat, on the deck; his wounds were mortal. Such was the terrible scene, amid which we kept on shouting and firing. Our men fought like tigers. Some of them pulled off their jackets and vests; while some, with nothing but a handkerchief tied | Radish, Rhubarb, Salsafy, Spinach, Squash, Tomaround the waistband of their trowsers, fought like heroes.

The din of battle continued. Grape and canister shot were poured through our port-holes like leaden rain, carrying death in their trail. The large shot came against the ship's side like iron hail, shaking her to the very keel, or passing through her timbers, and scattering terrific splinters, which did a more appalling work than even their own deathgiving blows. What with splinters, cannon-balls, grape, and canister, poured incessantly upon us, the reader may be assured that the work of death went on in a manner which must have been satisfactory even to the king of terrors him-

Suddenly the rattling of the iron hail ceased. We were ordered to cease firing. A profound silence ensued, broken only by the stifled grouns of the brave sufferers below. The enemy had shot ahead to repair damages, while we were so cut up that we lay utterly helpless. Our head-braces were shot away; the fore and main top masts were gone; the mizzen mast hung over the stern, having carried several men over in its fall; we were a complete wreck. The officers held a conneil and concluded to strike our

I now went below to see how matters appeared there. The first object I met was a man bearing a limb which had just been detached from some suffering wretch. Pursuing my way to the ward room, I necessarily passed through the steerage, which was strewed with the wounded; it was a sad spectacle, made more appalling by the groans and cries PAINTS, GILS, &c., which they are new receivwhich rent the air. Some were groaning. others were swearing most bitterly, a few were praying, while those last arrived were begging most piteously to have their wounds dressed next. The surgeon and his mate were smeared with blood from head to foot; they looked more like Intehers than doctors. Having so many patients, they had once shifted their quarters from the cock-pit to the steerage; they now removed to the ward room, and the long table, round which the officers had sat over many a merry feast, was soon covered with the bleeding forms of maimed and mutilated seamen. Most of the poor fellows were was with exceeding difficulty I moved through the steerage, it was so covered for sale by with mangled men, and so slippery with ap 16 streams of blood.

CURE FOR STAMMERING. - Some years ago a famous professor came to a town where I was then residing, and announced that he could "cure the worst cases of stuttering in ten minutes, without a surgical operation." A friend of mine pound, for sale by HENRY COOK & CO. was an inveterate case, and I advised him to call upon the wond rful magician. He called, was convinced by the testimonials exhibited, struck up a bargain, paid the fifty dollars, and soon called at my office, talking as straight as a railroad track.

I was greatly astonished, and asked my friend by what miracle he had been so strangely and suddenly relieved of his life-long trouble. He most provokingly informed me that he had made a solemn pledge not to reveal, the process of

I knew two other bad cases, ladies, and calling upon them, reported what had come to pass.

They were soon at the professor's rooms, came away greatly elated, raised 1 the hundred dollars, went the next day, paid the cash, and in half an hour were ready, had the question been popped, to say Yes! without a single jerk.

l was soon acquainted with several other cures, quite as remarkable, and resolved to put on my sharpest wits and wait upon the magician myself.

He seemed an honest, earnest man, and in two days I had made up my mind to pay a large fee and learn the strange art, with the privilege of using it to cure whomsoever I would. Those who had been cured by the professor were solemnly bound not to reveal !

the secret to any one; but my contract gave me the privilege of using the knowledge as I pleased.

And now I propose to give the readers of my journal a simple art which has enabled me to make very happy many unhappy stammerers. In my own hands it has often failed to effect the desired result, but in three-fourths of the cases which I have treated the cure has been complete.

The secret is simply this: The stammerer is made to mark the time in his speech, ust as it is ordinarily done in singing. He is at first to beat on every syllable. It is best at the first lesson to read some simple composition, like one of David's Psalms, striking the finger on the knee at every word, then read in a newspaper, beating each syllable. Soon you need only beat on every word.

You can beat time by striking the finger on the knee, by simply hitting the thumb against the forefinger, or moving the large toe in the boot. I doubt if the worst case of stuttering could continue long, provided the sufferer would read an hour or two every day, with thorough practice of this simple art, observing the same in his conversation.

As thousands have paid fifty and a hundred dollars for this secret, I take great pleasure in imparting it to the generous patrons of my journal -Dr Lewis' Journal of Physical Culture.
